ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This volume originated in Federico M. Rossi's proposal for a conference based on key ideas and concepts published in his dissertation (2011) from the European University Institute, which have subsequently appeared in Latin American Politics and Society (2015) and in a revised version of the dissertation published by Cambridge University Press (2017). We thank Cambridge University Press for the permission to reprint portions of Federico's book here.

The editors wish to thank Ludovico Feoli, director of the Center for Inter-American Policy and Research (CIPR) at Tulane University, for his steadfast support of this project. CIPR made available generous resources to hold the initial conference From Resistance to Neoliberalism to the Second Wave of Incorporation, "Comparative Perspectives on Reshaping the Political Arena," Tulane University, October 26–27, 2012. Those resources were augmented with funds from the Friezo Family Foundation Chair in Political Science. CIPR subsequently provided invaluable assistance in the preparation of the manuscript for publication. We owe a deep debt of gratitude to the contributors to this collection who labored through several revisions of their original papers as well as to the anonymous reviewers of the manuscript whose suggestions for revisions greatly strengthened the final product. The editors also thank Sefira Falcoff, assistant director of CIPR, and Ezra Spira-Cohen, PhD candidate in political science at Tulane University, for their assistance in preparing the manuscript for publication.

Federico would like to thank Donatella della Porta (Scuola Normale Superiore), Sid Tarrow (Cornell University), Jeff Goodwin (New York University), and Philippe Schmitter (European University Institute) for believing that it was worth mentoring and supporting his endeavors for over a decade.

Eduardo would like to give a special acknowledgment to Christopher Mitchell (New York University) for encouraging him to take up an academic career. Paul Drake (University of California, San Diego) is a mentor, colleague, and friend who taught him the basics—as well as the finer points—of just about everything in the profession.
